Joseph Barbera

The Block Party is quieter today and everyone is wearing their good clothes. We're taking a moment to remember the life of Joseph Barbera, one of the kings of cartoons. His jobs included cartoon artist, storyboard artist, director, and producer.

Joe Barbera was born in 1911 in the Little Italy neighborhood of New York City. He loved to draw — when he became old enough to work, he tried a few things, like banking, but wasn't happy until he found work at an animation studio. (In those days, cartoons were made to show in movie theaters, between a movie and other features.)

DRAWING BY TAYLOR SMITH, HIGH CHIO

After getting some experience, Joe joined the MGM studio, where he met Bill Hanna. The two hit it off and found they made a great team. Bill put character into their cartoons, while Joe wrote hilarious jokes and visuals. In 1940 they created the characters Tom and Jerry. Bill and Joe got awards and praise for their short cartoons about the cat who gets beaten up trying to catch the mouse.

In the '50s, more and more families were buying televisions. Everyone liked watching cartoons, but the only cartoons available were old cartoons from the movies. Hanna and Barbera formed a company of their own — called Hanna-Barbera, of course — and started creating new cartoons to show on television. Their first was in 1957, the unforgettable RUFF AND REDDY SHOW (well, my "Daddy DC" remembers it).

DRAWING BY DELANEY SHELZ, AGE 9

Cartoons for TV were made more cheaply than movie cartoons. The TV style was called "limited animation" and you can see the difference if you compare an old TOM AND JERRY feature against one made later.

But the new cartoons were popular. Hanna-Barbera became a successful company, employing many writers, artists, and technicians for more than 40 years. It created hundreds of characters, including THE FLINTSTONES, TOP CAT, THE JETSONS, and JONNY QUEST (and less famous, like C.B. BEARS and ROMAN HOLIDAY). If you get the BOOMERANG channel, you can probably see a Hanna-Barbera show any time you turn on the TV, 24 hours a day, seven days a week.

DRAWING BY AFRICA MEGAWANT, AGE 8

So what, you may be asking, does Joe Barbera have to do with my DC comic books and CARTOON NETWORK BLOCK PARTY? Well, his company also created our old friend SCOOPY-DOO. Two of the best cartoons made by Hanna-Barbera were made for Cartoon Network: OEXTER'S LABORATORY and THE POWERPUFF GIRLS.

[The studio hired talented people like Iwan Takamoto,

Goondy Tarkenton, and Craig McCracken who made irreproachable contributions to those three shows.]

Joe Barbera died in December, 2006, just five years after his parents' 100th birthday. For over 50 years, he was a major player behind the cartoons that you and your parents and your grandparents have watched, from TOM AND JERRY to THE POWERPUFF GIRLS. What a great way to be remembered!
